DAYTON, O. --Are your methods and procedures in purchasing productive and economical?

That's the question Gil Riches, of the Philip Carey Manufacturing Company in Cincinnati and an instructor in purchasing at the University of Cincinnati evening college, will ask in October at the fourth annual Procurement Conference here.

Mr. Riches is one of a number of experts in the purchasing field who will be on the program of the yearly purchasing management seminar which is co-sponsored by the Dayton Association of Purchasing Agents and the University of Dayton.

Scene of this year's program again will be the secluded Patterson Memorial Center, adjacent to the University campus, and again this year, Dr. Howard T. Lewis, well known procurement specialist, will be conference director.

The Oct. 7-8 program is expected to draw purchasing personnel from all over Ohio. Complete programs and registration forms are available by contacting the Community Service Center, University of Dayton, Dayton 9, Ohio.
